

ABSTRACTA method for the preparation of crystalline dexloxiglumide

The present invention describes a novel method for the purification of dexloxiglumide by crystallization from isopropyl ether which permits the production, in a reproducible manner, of a product with morphological and particle-size characteristics such as to favour its use in the preparation of oral pharmaceutical forms on an industrial scale.